

THE TREES OF WASHINGTON.

Varieties of Shade Trees Planted and Grown in the Capitol.

At the time of Washington was decided upon as the site for the National Capitol the territory now embraced within the city limits was heavily wooded with indigenous trees. The growth of oaks (including several varieties), of buttonwood, red maple, mountain-ash beech, linden, catalpa, locust, chestnut and tulip poplar being very abundant and much of it valuable timber, excited the cupidity of speculators. So the original forest was all felled and the wood used either for timber in building or fuel, or sold for the profit that would accrue therefrom. Prior to the systematic and well organized action of the present Park Commission numerous spasmodic attempts had been made to beautify the streets by planting shade trees, but these attempts lacked system, were often the acts of property holders consulting simply their own taste and without any regard to the acts of their neighbors, and resulted in a promiscuous setting out of mixed trees of different varieties (in patches here and there) often of the most worthless kind. Some of these trees, were not interfered with by the change in grade, have been allowed to remain. They are principally elm, poplar—including the Carolina and tulip—honey-locust, maple—including the sugar and the soft ash, horse chestnut, linden buttonwood, allanhus, locust and abele. The Park Commission, in the performance of its labors, has acted wisely and with abundant caution in the selection of the young trees for planting. In all, twenty varieties of hardy and, in most cases, the more rapid growing trees have been selected and planted. They include the nettle, the plane-tree, the linden, the ash the witch hazel, the willow, the magnolia, the pulse, the soap-berry, the bigonia and pine families. American elm corky white elm, white maple, Norway maple, sugar maple, sycamore maple, red maple, box elder, buttonwood, sweet gum, Carolina poplar, tulip trees, honey locust horse chestnut, catalpa, Kentucky coffee, and Ginkgo.

Victoria, Australia, is about to borrow another twenty millions of dollars.

The tunnel between Dover and Calais advances, Sir Garnet Wolseley notwithstanding, at the rate of a foot an hour.

Richard Wagner will pass the winter at Salerno and thence go to Greece to complete a musical work on a classical subject.

Lord Lyons has now represented England at Paris for fourteen years, an unusually long tenure of the blue ribbon of British embassies.

Mr. Gladstone has had a regular body guard of police of late. This is as much a novelty for an English Prime Minister as for an American President.

To make sand paper, crush glass under a runner and sift it into about six sizes; coat a good quantity on manila paper with thin glue, and dust the pulverized glass over it. Sometimes two coats of glue and glass are thus applied to the paper.

A good cement for stopping joints, such as around chimneys and the like, may be as follows: White lead, as sold in the keg, mix with enough pure sand to make a stiff paste that will not run. It grows hard by exposure and resists heat, cold and water.

At the Paris mint medals are bronzed by boiling them for a quarter of an hour in the following solution: Pulverized verdigris, 500 grammes; strong vinegar, 160 grammes; water, 8 litres. An untinned copper boiler is used, and the medals are separated from each other by bits of glass or wood.
